

It was an excellent decision to remain at the hut and examine your evacuation options. Your friend probably has an appendicitis. The appendix is located at the bottom of the lower right quadrant. When infected, it swells. While presentations vary considerably, the heel-drop test has a high degree of reliability. Begin an urgent Level 1 or 2 evacuation immediately. If his appendix ruptures the pain will likely resolve... and then return ten-fold within a few hours. Death is possible if it ruptures.
