

Joe has an severely fractured and unstable pelvis, and is bleeding internally. Do your best to reduce the bleeding and pain by improvising a pelvic splint using the hip-corset method. Consider cutting out the sides of his day pack for the corset and saving the front and back—with its foam padding—for ground insulation. Use your sat phone to call for assistance. Insulate Joe as much as possible from the environment using any gear available and send two people to the snowmobiles for the emergency bivy equipment and food. Be aware that in spite of your best efforts, Joe may not survive.
